On a broader scope covering promulgated laws and other projects actively researched Kindly gloss over the website above

Our plans were significantly to expand our corporate law books base and be attentive to opportunities and have been delighted with synergies built.. On track with projects having achieved what we set out do namely address in corporate books curial issues such as Security for Costs, new Property Laws, keeping an eye focused on expropriation of property, corruption in South Africa and incongruous non-emergency Health & profit issues arising.

Noted legislative development that Parliament did not sit for the majority of 2020 - a very uncertain situation with potential for a lack of attention regarding new issues and/or new schemes - if they restricted the Premier's power or if sufficient opportunity was afforded to raise regulatory objections or those from from "stand-alone" committees and/or their unConstitutional Regulatory statements. We continue with the goals of Company Law Today going forward into 2022 and encourage businesses to put in extra effort to open and operate, it looks like risk analysts are wary of lockdowns for indefinite periods etc.

Commencing the year compliant but not thriving however with our eyes on the prize of good ethical business.
